Experience

Thirty-five years' experience as a civil trial lawyer concentrating in international and domestic commercial cases (up to nine figures) involving antitrust, mergers & acquisitions, Hatch-Waxman, IP, contracts, construction, real estate, accounting, financial, securities matters. 60% of practice involves financial/business issues (securities, real estate, real estate development, contracts, secured transactions, financial services representing banks, borrowers, developers, life science & pharmaceutical companies, accountants, owners), professional liability (lawyers, architects, accountants). Thirty percent (30%) of practice involves intellectual property, unfair competition, restrictive covenants, copyright and patents in the drug, medical device, music, advertising, sports, publishing, computer, fragrance, food and fashion industries.

Mediator Experience

Since 1997, has mediated over 100 domestic and international disputes covering: broker-dealer disputes, securities claims, commodities futures issues, licensing, unfair competition, breach of employment disputes, trademark infringement and declaratory judgment disputes in the music, liquor, food, publishing, accounting and advertising industries, copyright infringement in music industry, patent litigation in computer, shredder industry; executive employment agreements, environmental tax credit joint ventures, insurance coverage disputes (both primary and third party coverage, as well as syndication issues). Has also mediated trust disputes over real property as well as accounting matters involving real and personal property. Examples of range of damages in mediations: securities disputes from approximately $500,000 to $150M; patent disputes from approximately $25M to $250M; trademark and copyright disputes from approximately $3M to $250M; coverage disputes from approximately $50M to $500M; accounting, breach of contract, breach of fiduciary duty and negligence from approximately $5M to $150M; employment disputes from approximately $150,000 to $5M.

Representative Issues Handled as a Mediator

Representative issues in mediations include: allegations concerning violations of "know-your-customer" rules, the applicability of certain securities regulatory exemptions to transactions and violations, securities fraud violations under the '33 and '34 Act and related rules; allegations over trademark infringement including the scope of the trademark (both common law and statutory; both in U.S. and in foreign countries, including Germany, Switzerland, U.K., France, China, Canada, and Italy), breach of contract involving licensing fee, trademark validity and adequacy of disclosures to the PTO; assignability of trademarks; patent issues have involved state of the art and related disclosures in patent filings; amount of damages recoverable; copyright issues have involved ownership, assignment, and rights under both statutory and common law as well as damages; trust cases have involved the validity of the trust, the construction of the trust, fiduciary and non-fiduciary claims, breach of contract claims over trust agreements; trust accounting and damages relating to claims of breach of trust; real estate mediations involve damages due to property losses and economic losses as well as bidding disputes and damages recoverable, breach of fiduciary and breach of contract over real estate managing director; accounting claims in the real estate and professional service industries involving damages recoverable, applicable industry standards and rules applicable especially relating to common-law law firm partnerships; joint ventures in environmental tax credit litigation involved rights and remedies including future profits and damages. Trade secret mediations have included whether the claims involve a trade secret and the amount of lost profits recoverable for an established product line as well as a new venture.

Mediator Style & Process Preferences	I view the mediation process much like I view the arbitration process: lawyer-friendly. I like and trust lawyers and, from having practiced for 30 years, understand the kinds of issues which they often confront. I try to be very fair to both/all sides. I tend to be direct with the lawyers and their clients about meeting and controlling expectations. The more experienced lawyers and clients who have participated in mediations for the most part tend to be more open and candid about the specific difficulties to reaching a settlement whether they are substantive or practical; they also tend to ask a mediator to act more as an advocate with the other side. Some lawyers use a mediator to make a realistic assessment of their cases for clients, typically having already presented the same issues to the client. I conduct confidential discussions with each side or sides of lawyers and clients - this often results in a quicker resolution of the issues - and disclose only those conversations after agreement with each side. Creative ways to settle cases are well worth the time and, depending on the case, I like to explore -- and succeed in resolving -- those issues as well.
